Bold strokes show artist's view of nature

New works by Barbara Postel will be exhibited at her gallery, Pyramid Studio, on Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. in conjunction with Fall Festival in Point Pleasant, Pa.

Critics have called her a master colorist and Postel's choice of vibrant color amplifies her view of nature.

In her most recent work, Ms. Postel dwells on "the majestic, spiritual side of nature in bold, expressive designs."

The artist has been praised by critics and fellow-artists alike for her paintings inspired by the rocky terrain of the Delaware River Valley. She is also inspired by trips to Italy, France and Morocco.

Critic Brian Rushton says "her art is impregnated with an innate sense of structure of arrested movement . . . her works promote the possibility that the image may continue moving at any moment."

Ms. Postel's work has been in many single and group exhibits, most recently in the Soho 20 Gallery Invitational in New York City. Her work is represented in collections throughout the United States, Canada and Europe. Her paintings of the Delaware River are published in the Encyclopedia of Living Artists and the 1990 Women Artist's Datebook.

"The exhibition captures the extraordinary range and accomplishments of the artist from her large, luminescent paintings to the architectural design of the studio whose geometrical platforms and pivotal walls provide a fitting backdrop to her dramatic paintings," said studio director Carlos Guerrero.

The studio is located at 7644 Tohickon Hill Road. For further information call Guerrero at (215) 297-5278.
